Effect of phenytoin on the development of tolerance to penicillin V in penicillin allergic mice. We demonstrated previously that repetitive exposure to penicillin V (PCV) produced a tolerance state in mice (Macleod et al., Am. J. Physiol., 237:997, 1980). In this report, we investigated the effect of phenytoin (PHT) on the development of tolerance to PCV in penicillin allergic mice. PHT alone (300 mg/kg ip) did not affect the skin irritation caused by PCV in penicillin allergic mice, but it inhibited the skin irritation in mice pretreated with PCV. PHT decreased the skin irritation caused by PCV in mice. In addition, it inhibited the development of tolerance to PCV. At doses of 300 or 900 mg/kg ip of PHT, the tolerance was inhibited completely. We conclude that in the present study PHT inhibits the development of tolerance to PCV in penicillin allergic mice.Alinekwasi Alinekwasi is a town in northern Namibia, in Kunene Region.
