The $130-million plan to privatize 911 call handling was announced in January by Toronto Mayor Rob Ford, amid concern that the city's police services were stretched thin, and that there wasn't enough money to keep up with the high number of calls for service. In a bid to save money, and to better address the concerns of Torontonians, the city is replacing the current police call-takers with Student Response Unit officers, who will be hired to become phone-operators and answer questions over the phone, and drive to locations where police are needed. The Student Response Unit officers, which include four full-time, part-time and post-secondary students, will be attached to divisions at 345 Division (Bloor St. W. and Greenwood Ave. W.), 20 Division (Danforth Ave. and College St.), 22 Division (Dundas St. and Bishop St.) and 41 Division (King St. W. and Bremner Blvd.). When asked about the project at a special board meeting, Chief William Blair said he didn't want to "get into specifics" about where

What's New In?

ReOpen is an easy to use application that monitors the recent activity of Windows Explorer. When you've closed a folder or program, the system tray icon (the small square in the bottom left hand corner of your screen) will light up and show which application or folder you've recently closed. Just click the icon and you're on your way. The program will highlight all your recently used programs and folders in the window and give you several quick access options: - Open Window: Open the folder/application that you closed - Fast Folder: Go to that folder/application - Search App: Search for that folder/application. - Recent Folders: List the recently opened folders - Recent Programs: List the recently opened applications. - Open Recent: Open a folder or program you have recently used. Unfortunately, as monitors typically cool with time after a system is turned on, high ambient temperatures often lead to non-uniformity in the displayed image. Typically, this non-uniformity is observed as darker shadows, spots or otherwise reduced image quality in the upper portions of the image. Frequently, image quality is degraded in part by a lack of color balance and brightness uniformity in the face of image scanning and ambient heating. Since ambient heating is typically due to white heat dissipation through the panel and the structure surrounding the panel, the areas immediately adjacent the panel are at least as heated as the center of the panel or more. Paint, often times of a mismatched, thermal conductivity, is frequently used in an attempt to obtain a darker screen. Such practice often increases screen brightness and color temperature, but does not adequately compensate for the inherent thermal gradient found in the monitor. It is quite common to find a monitor which contains paint on the upper surface where the coating's relatively high
